ORGANIZATION CONTEXT

The University of the South Pacific (USP) is a unique, multinational university jointly owned and governed by 12 Pacific Island member countries, with Papua New Guinea on the cusp of becoming a full member. One of only two regional universities in the world, USP serves a region spanning more than 33 million square kilometres of ocean. It is a living embodiment of Pacific aspiration and a repository and promoter of knowledge about the history, cultures, and natural environments of the Pacific Islands. Guided by Pacific values of inclusive and participatory dialogue, USP's mission is to influence Pacific Islanders through the pursuit of excellence in knowledge, improving the lives of individuals and communities, and shaping the futures of generations to come.

The Country Director (USP Tuvalu Islands) role forms part of USP's regional leadership architecture, which strengthens in-country strategic leadership through the establishment of Country Director roles across all regional member country campuses. This reflects a deliberate shift to elevate national engagement while professionalising campus operations through dedicated operational management.

Organizational Structure

POSITION DESCRIPTION

PURPOSE

The Country Director is the University's most senior representative within the host country and serves as the strategic and diplomatic interface between the University and the national government. The role is responsible for representing the University's interests, fostering strong government and stakeholder relationships, leading the delivery of USP's strategic priorities at the country level, and ensuring campus performance in alignment with institutional goals.

The position is central to building deep national partnerships, particularly with the Ministry of Education and other departments responsible for human resource planning, national development, and tertiary education.
